INTRODUCTION

Screenwriting, also called scriptwriting, is the art and craft of writing scripts for mass media such as feature films, television productions or video games. It is frequently a freelance profession.

Screenwriters are responsible for researching the story, developing the narrative, writing the screenplay, and delivering it, in the required format, to development executives. Screenwriters therefore have great influence over the creative direction and emotional impact of the screenplay and, arguably, of the finished film. They either pitch original ideas to producers in the hope that they will be optioned or sold, or screenwriters are commissioned by a producer to create a screenplay from a concept, true story, existing screen work or literary work, such as a novel, poem, play, comic book or short story.

MARKET SIZE & WORTH

- An A-list screenwriter may be paid between $100,000 to $2 million to write a script, including $400,000 a week for each rewrite of a film in trouble;script doctors may be called upon to revise the final draft at $100,000 to $200,000 a week. Recently, Columbia Pictures has been offering the best screenwriters 2 percent of the gross profits (after the production and marketing budget has been deducted).
- A top screenwriter may earn as much as $2m per movie, plus a percentage, while a writer called in to doctor the script can earn six figures.
- During 2012 Median Pay of Authors and Writers was $55,940 per year and number of jobs available during the same year was 129,100.
- . According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), the national 25th-75th percentile salary range for scriptwriters was $40,920-$83,790 as of May 2014. The BLS also reported that all writers in radio and television earned an average of $57,830 for the same time period. The same source reported that the expected job growth for the 2012-2022 decade for all writers and authors was slower than average at 3%.

DEMOGRAPHICS:

- Orzoco found that between 1991 and 2000, women wrote 14 percent of spec scripts sold and only 9 percent between 2010 and 2012..
- The Ageism factor is pretty easy to understand. Somehow, older (and presumably wiser) isn't necessarily better or smarter. In Hollywood think, a 23-year-old will write a more commercially viable script than a 43-year-old or 53-year-old. They might be right, if the plot has to do with high school or college kids ('American Pie,' 'Road Trip' or any Freddy Prinze Jr. movie). But when it comes to stories with depth and weight, I think it's fair to say that age and life experience will supersede youth and inexperience.
- Television is still a very male-dominated industry. The Writer's Guild of America (West) claims that only 27 percent of film writers and 19 percent of television writers it represents are female.

WHY ARE PEOPLE IN THIS NICHE

- The Money : But if money isn't their only motive, and they know they want to write, then they can probably make more as a steadily working screenwriter than with any other form of writing.
- They Get to Tell Stories: If creating unique, captivating characters and taking them over seemingly insurmountable obstacles to achieve visible, bigger-than-life goals is the kind of writing that thrills them.
- People Love the Movies (and/or Television): People not only love seeing them, they relish the challenge of staying within a rigid formula and creating a visual story that is original, thoughtful and emotionally captivating.
- People want to reach a Huge Audience: More people saw last week's episode of 'The West Wing' than have read 'Gone With the Wind'. Makes them stop and think, doesn't it?
- People Love to Write: Screenwriting may not employ all the big words in the dictionary, but they still get to spend their day lost in the power of language.
